

Vincent Zammit

Author, radio and TV producer, Visiting Lecturer at the Institute of Tourism Studies (Malta) and the University of Malta, licensed tourist guide

Vincent Zammit MA (Baroque Studies), BA (Mediterranean Studies) is a Visiting Lecturer at the Institute of Tourism Studies (Malta) and the University of Malta. He has been involved in Maltese culture, heritage and tourism since 1978. Vincent Zammit has authored a number of studies and books and has produced a number of radio and television programmes on Maltese history and culture. He has delivered lectures to various cultural groups on different subjects, in Malta and abroad. Vincent has contributed papers and chapters in foreign publications regarding religious tourism, events, and tourism in general. A licensed tourist guide himself, Vincent has been responsible for the preparation of tourist guides for these last 28 years. He has attended a number of international conferences abroad where he presented a number of papers about various aspects of tourism in Malta, as well as being the organiser of international conferences about religious tourism and tourist guides. He specialises in creating alternative and different tours around Malta for the culturally minded locals and visitors alike.