After studying French and Spanish literature (UGent, BE) and theatre studies (UA, BE), he started working as a French teacher in high schools. He has also been a scientific collaborator at the Ghent University on the literature department. At the same time, he started working as the communication officer at the Brussels Kunstenoverleg / Réseau des Arts à Bruxelles, a network of Brussels art organisations. Those were his first steps in the cultural field.

In 2015 he switched to Hiros, a management office for performing artists (choreographers, dancers, theatre makers...) as their communication officer.

Since the end of 2016 he is working at BOZAR, Centre for Fine Arts, in Brussels, where he is responsible for the communication of theatre & dance, literature and agora (conferences, debates, lectures...) departments.

Last year he took over the coordination of the communication officers team, that consists of 9 colleagues, and the digital team (4 colleagues).
